Mr. and Mrs. Otto Grupp Leave For Tour of Europe

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Grupp, Sr., of State Road, Croydon, sailed on the S. S. Columbus at midnight, Thursday, for a pleasure trip to Europe. They plan to arrive at Paris, then visit Monte Carlo and Rome, Switzerland and Germany will also be paid a visit and if the heat is not too intense Mr. and Mrs. Grupp will go to the Orient. They are planning to return to the States about November.

Mrs. Anna Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grupp, arrived from Beverly Hills, California, a few weeks ago, to help prepare for their departure. Mrs. Harrison will remain until about June 1st, when she will return to her home.

Bristol Lodge Members To Visit Frankford

Tomorrow a visitation will be paid by Adelpian Lodge No. 50, I. O. O. F., of Bridgeport, Conn., to Oxford Lodge, No. 14, of Frankford. The degree team of the former will exemplify the first, second and third degrees.

Delegates from Bristol are planning to attend and all who expect to go are requested to meet tomorrow at 4:30 o'clock at the I. O. O. F. Hall, here.

This is a return visitation from the Adelpian Lodge, as the degree staff of Oxford Lodge put on work at Bridgeport some time ago.

The affair will take place at LaLau Temple, Philadelphia, and it is thought it will be one of the biggest lodge events that has occurred in this section for some time.

Mr. James Sales, of 213 Market street, has returned to Bristol from a several days' holiday visit to his mother at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. Fred King, of 400 Dorrance street, had as Easter Monday guests, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weber and daughter, Marian, of Philadelphia.

Sixth Ward Boys

All entries for Boys' Week events must be in at my home, 317 Monroe street, not later than April 27th. Final try-outs for all field events will take place Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock at the high school track.

HARRISON C. LEAKE,
Sixth Ward Leader.

Meeting of General Boys' Week Committee and ward leaders will be held in American Legion rooms tonight at 8:30.

CARELESSNESS COSTING US 12,000 HUMAN LIVES A YEAR

(EDITORIAL)

IF five hundred millions of dollars is a staggering and almost inconceivable sum to be practically thrown away each year as a consequence of our preventable fires, what language can describe the guilt that is upon us as a people for our wanton sacrifice of 12,000 or more lives each year, as an additional price that we pay for our inexcusable carelessness?

Although property that is actually destroyed never can be regained, at least it may be replaced. But not so a single human life. Extinguished, it is gone forever from this world, and all our wishes, all our regrets, all our vaunted science, cannot bring it back.

Think of 12,000 such lives—men, women and children; almost as many as constitute the entire population of Bristol—being brought to a sudden and agonizing end each and every year, by fires which in most instances are the result of carelessness in one form or another.

As Mr. Franklin Wentworth, secretary of the National Fire Protection Association, very truly said, in his address to Borough Council on April 11th, if any such loss of life ever should occur at any given time and place as a consequence of fire, we would be appalled at such a holocaust.

Yet the mere fact of scattered time and place cannot alter the total, and the harvest of death continues unabated, at an average rate of a thousand a month.

The material things of life are so abundant in this country, and they may be procured here so much more easily than anywhere else in the world, that it may be pretty accurate to say that our attitude toward our huge annual property loss is largely one of psychology, resulting from the comparative ease with which property that is destroyed may be replaced.

But shall it be said that we have this same cold-blooded attitude toward the almost deliberate sacrifice of human life upon a wholesale scale?

It has not been deliberate, up to the present, for none of us had clearly realized what was going on. We have been careless and thoughtless, allowing people to be killed who never should have been killed, and taking it as a sort of matter of course, regarding it as a great but unavoidable misfortune.

But now that we are becoming acquainted with the facts; now that we are coming to realize that a large part of this terrible yearly tragedy is wholly unnecessary and easily avoidable; now that we do know that it has been a consequence of individual and collective carelessness—it certainly would be a deliberate sacrifice of human life if we permitted it to continue.

Throughout the country men, women and children are rising to combat this national characteristic of carelessness with respect to fire and its causes. They are driving home such simple facts as that a carelessly tossed cigarette, an accumulation of rubbish, the thoughtless use of explosives or the unwise storage of inflammables, each and all may be, and in thousands upon thousands of instances each year are, the cause of the most costly and destructive fires.

To focus national attention upon the subject and thus achieve all the progress possible, next week has been designated Fire Prevention Week. It is a week during which each and every one of us should "put our house in order," and adopt for the future such customs and practices as will afford each of us and all of us the maximum degree of protection against the starting of a fire.

Let us remember the truth of the old adage that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and let us absorb all the information we can, and do everything we can, to diminish and eventually eliminate this terrific annual loss which we now count in hundreds of millions of dollars and thousands of human lives.

ARREST BROTHERS FOR STEALING CHICKENS

State Troopers Arrest Three Brothers and Another
Lad

HELD IN COUNTY JAIL

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 22.—Three brothers and another boy living with the same family were arrested yesterday afternoon by Trooper Richard Barker and Trooper Felix R. Gowan, of the local sub-station of State Police, for stealing 200 chickens in Tinicum township, three miles east of Ottsville on the night of March 3rd.

Those arrested and being held in the Bucks County Prison here for a hearing tonight at 7 o'clock before Justice Irvin M. James, include William Tscheschleg, aged 16; his brother, Walter, aged 12; another brother, Henry, aged 20; and Peter Gatena, aged 15, a step-brother of the other boys.

It is said that alleged cruel treatment of the stepmother of the Tscheschleg brothers at the hands of the boys, caused the stepmother to inform the police and others of the theft of the chickens from the henery of Mike Temoshesgip, who lives three miles from the Tscheschleg farm. The stepmother of the boys works in Philadelphia and the boys live with their father on the farm. Gatena is Mrs. Tscheschleg's one son.

None of the boys admit the thefts. They deny knowing anything about the stolen chickens although police say that it is a matter of common discussion in the community that the boys arrested yesterday have been

BRISTOL MAN RELATES TRAVELING EXPERIENCES

Mr. J. E. W. Tracy Delightfully Entertains Members
Of the Exchange Club

TO SPEAK AGAIN SOON

Members of the Bristol Exchange Club had a real treat at their meeting last evening when they listened to J. E. W. Tracy, a member of the local club, give his experiences while traveling in foreign lands.

Mr. Tracy was for many years in the employ of the United States Government, as an agricultural explorer. His assignments took him from Norway and Sweden, across Russia into Siberia and south through Europe, across the Mediterranean into Africa, and from Alaska to Mexico.

Among his many interesting experiences which he recounted, were his meetings with Luther Burbank and Henry Van Dyke. He gave a description of their personalities, which only a close personal touch could acquire.

So pleased were the members with his talk, that they requested him to speak again later on. Out of town speakers, having been booked for each week up to the month of June, Mr. Tracy consented to continue his talk on the first open night.

MOTOR TO ATHENS

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Custer and family, of 327 Hayes street, and Mr. F. A. Lohr, of 321 Hayes street, motored to Athens, Pa., on Thursday, to visit Mrs. Custer's parents, at which place Mrs. Custer and children will remain for a month's visit.

Public Health Nurses Will Meet Here, May 7th

The annual meeting of the public health nurses of Bucks County will be held at the Community House, here, on Saturday, May 7th.

Speakers will be: Miss I. Malinda Havey, assistant national director of Public Health Nursing, Red Cross, Washington, D. C.; her subject being "Rural Nursing"; Dr. William C. Turnbull, Department Secretary of Health, of the Pennsylvania Health Department, Harrisburg, his talk being on "The Undernourished Children's Camps"; Miss Alice M. O'Holoran, chief of the Bureau of Mercy of the Pennsylvania Health Department, will also speak.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bowman and Miss Sadie Boyd, of 248 Monroe street, were Easter Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bowman's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Bowman, of Collingdale, Pa.

CO-OPERATION KEEPS FISH IN STREAMS AND GAME IN FIELDS IN LOWER BUCKS COUNTY

To Gunners and Fishermen at Large:

In Bristol and the surrounding communities of lower Bucks county there are hundreds of gunners and fishermen. We each eagerly devote a part of our time to the rod and gun as the various seasons appear. And we each gain a wonderful sportsman's pleasure if we are able to bring home a few fish in the creel or some game in the bag to prove that our day of sport has been well spent. Of course some few would tell us that it's not the game they bag or the fish they catch; it's the joy of being in the great out-of-doors. They, we find, are simply nature lovers, and could perhaps leave their rod or gun at home without great loss of pleasure. But we are "game bred sportsmen" as the old timer puts it: "we hanker fer th' real game 'n lots of her." That's what we want—game.

Years ago, when there were more covers and a reasonable number of hunters, the natural game propagation was self-sufficient in supplying stock for the gunners, but today the virgin timber is cut, the fields are open and almost an army of gunners enters the fields in the open season—each to get his share. Thus our stock of game is annually threatened to be shot off, and soon it would be gone entirely if it were not for outside means used to replenish the field stock each year.

With fishing, the conditions are almost equal. Pollution of streams and the rapid increase in number of fishermen have drawn heavily from the streams; and fishing today, especially in the small streams, would be practically useless if it were not for their annual restocking.

As I said before, we all hanker for the full creel and the heavy bag. We want them and we should interest ourselves in making them possible. There is a means by which excellent gunning and good fishing can be made available here. And by a few thoughtful sportsmen of this community this means has already been exercised to the point of keeping game reasonably plentiful in spite of the army of shooters. But what we want is the co-operation of every gunner and fisher so that our hunting will not only be fair, but will be the very best in the state, so far as small game is concerned.

Instead of being a co-operative group of sportsmen working for a cause, we are, as the heading of this message titles us: gunners and fishermen at large. Most of us are at large and distant from promoting an interest in the betterment of our rod and gun sport. Those few who have been responsible for the shooting we do have, are the active members of the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association. This association, by its persistent and careful efforts has made Bucks County the leading county of the state for ringneck pheasant shooting.

This association spends its tireless efforts and almost every dollar of its income to stock our fields with pheasants and rabbits. To promote the cause, furthermore, the association solicits your membership and active support. The association deserves your membership as well as it needs it. You owe it to her and to yourself to become a member, instead of standing aside and hoping for only a few to carry on. Every new member means that much more towards pheasants, rabbits and quail to be placed on our local fields. Let us do our bit.

Each Friday, beginning with the next, there will appear in the Bristol Courier a hunting or fishing story composed by one of our local sportsmen. Also, we are going to tell you more about the Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association and what it is continually doing for the production and protection of our game. Watch the Courier each Friday for these stories and facts.

Yours for better sport,
Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association,

STORM DELAYS PLAY GIVEN BY STUDENTS

Noise of Rain on Tin Roof
Drowns Voices of The Performers

SECOND ACT DELAYED

"Miss Bob White," the musical comedy success which students of the Bristol High School attempted to render last night in the Colonial Theater was given under considerable difficulty, due to the storm.

It was during the first act that the storm broke and the heavy downpour of rain on the tin roof of the theater made such a noise that the audience could not hear a word that was spoken. Occasionally the high notes of the vocalists and the orchestra and also the voices of the choruses were audible.

After the first act there was an intermission until such time as the rain ceased so that the performers could proceed with the production. The lights were dimmed several times and ushers went about the theater with flash lights. Vivid flashes of lightning illuminated the theater at frequent intervals.

The students and audience were patient throughout the evening and took the conditions in a good humored sort of way and sat in their seats until the play was completed.

The house, last night, was crowded and the orchestra played during the intermission and Joseph Lanza gave violin selections.

Third and final performance will be given tonight when it is expected that another capacity audience will attend.

F. E. MUSNUFF IS HEART ATTACK VICTIM

Suddenly Succumbs at Corona
Leather Works Where He Was Employed

WAS 67 YEARS OF AGE

Shortly after arriving at the plant of the Corona Leather Works, this morning, Franklin E. Musnuff, of 318 Lafayette street, fell to the floor, and a few minutes later died.

Mr. Musnuff, who was employed as a carpenter at the Corona Works, had not complained of feeling ill and was apparently in good health when he left his home this morning. Co-workers who went to his assistance when he was stricken, summoned Dr. Geo. T. Fox, but upon arrival of the latter, Mr. Musnuff was pronounced dead.

Deputy Coroner W. Firman Young, was called, who issued a certificate stating that death was caused by heart failure.

Mr. Musnuff had made his home in Bristol during his entire life-time, and for several years was a member of the Borough police force. He numbered many among his list of friends. He was 67 years of age. Survivors are: Mrs. Mary Musnuff, wife of the deceased, four children, Frances, Albert and Franklin, Jr., of Bristol, and Mrs. Harold Lee, of Trenton, N. J.; two sisters and one brother, Mrs. Neal Phillips and Mrs. Julia Lyndall, and George Musnuff, all of Bristol.

TRACK MEET

If the weather is permissible a track meet will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the grounds of the new Croydon School, State Road. Pupils from some of the neighboring schools are to compete with Croydon pupils.

GUESTS OF FRIENDS

Mrs. W. C. Zihak and daughter, Gloria, of Stonehurst, were Thursday luncheon and dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Lohr, of 321 Hayes street.

The prize committee of which Mrs. Edward Renk is chairlady, ably assisted by Miss Ida Bruden is endeavoring to have a number of useful and valuable prizes.

Tickets can be had from directors.

LIGHTNING HITS THREE BUILDINGS; ONE DESTROYED

Large Barn on Bloomfield
Farm, Tullytown, Total
Loss

HITS CLARK'S STORE

Lightning Was Very Severe
And Hit Electrical System

Striking with mid-summer fury an electrical storm broke over this section last night and flooded streets and basements, washed out newly made lawns and bolts of lightning struck, setting two places afire. Telephone and light services were disrupted.

A large barn on the farm of Mrs. Anna Bloomfield, Falls Road, along the canal, Tullytown, was completely destroyed and a cow shed damaged. One cow and several hogs were burned. All of the horses were gotten from the stable. A lot of farming implements were destroyed and some crops. The loss, it is estimated, will total around $8,000.

Officer Hughes, of Bensalem Township, was driving from Trenton along the Bristol Pike at the time that the fire broke. He drove into Tullytown and summoned Tullytown firemen. Hughes then endeavored to call the Bristol firemen but all telephone service out of Tullytown was "dead." Hughes drove to Bristol and called the Bristol firemen also firemen from Croydon, Newportville and Hulmeville.

Upon arrival near the scene of the blaze the Bristol companies and Morrisville companies could not get near the fire due to the fact that the bridge across the canal is only a three ton span. The barn was located about 300 feet from the house.

Hughes was the second person to enter the barn and assisted in getting out some of the contents.

The blaze attracted large crowds of sight-seers who drove to the scene in automobiles. These automobiles blocked the fire apparatus and were responsible for delaying them in reaching the blaze.

One of the buildings struck was the Union Volunteer Fire Company quarters on South Pennsylvania avenue, Morrisville, where considerable damage was done. The bolt struck the siren and after disabling it, entered the building and ripped out the electrical equipment. The rear door was also damaged and the lights extinguished, but the building did not become ignited. Several firemen were sitting around a table playing cards when the crash came and they were badly frightened but none stunned.

Lightning struck wires at the building occupied by Clark's Jewelry Store, Mill and Cedar streets. The bolt burned insulation off the wires which were quickly ripped out by Mr. Clark.

In Bristol the storm destroyed 26 telephone lines and 88 stations; Cornwells, one cable; Langhorne, 14 lines and 45 stations.

In the opinion of officials of the Philadelphia Suburban Gas & Electric Company the storm was unusually severe for this season of the year. A number of transmission boxes were "cracked" and this caused interruptions in the service during the time that it took to make the necessary relays.

An oil switch blew out at the Bristol sub-station and at the Edgely sub-station leads were turned off.

Women's Voters League Give Card Party Benefit

The League of Women Voters held a card party in the Elks' home on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Doyle Webb was chairlady of the committee assisted by Mrs. Roy Tracy, Mrs. J. Ellis and Miss G. McMichael.

Ten tables of "500" were formed and eight games were played. Mrs. Doyle Webb won first prize with a score of 3800, Mrs. Roy Tracy winning second with a score of 3870.

Others who obtained prizes were: Miss G. McMichael, Mrs. L. Dries, Mrs. N. B. Bertolotto, Mrs. R. Pearson, Mrs. J. Shipp, Mrs. L. Girton, Mrs. L. Machette, Mrs. W. Pearson, Mrs. J. Singer, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. Savacool, Mrs. H. Pope, Mrs. V. V. Vansant, Mrs. Jensensius, Mrs. William Doron, Mrs. Charles Ancker.

Daughters Of America To Have Box Social Here

Bristol Council No. 58, Daughters of America, will have a box social tonight in their lodge room, when the meeting adjourns.

Each member is requested to bring something in a box that will add to the refreshments of the evening.

On Monday evening Bristol Council will journey to Norristown where a district meeting will be held. All members who desire to go please report at lodge on Friday night or send their names by some member of the committee.

—Mr. Al Smith, of Boston, Mass., was a guest over Saturday and Easter Sunday at the home of his cousin, Miss Mary McGee, of 706 Pine street.

ALL LIKE PRAISE

Nobody has ever explained satisfactorily why every human being is susceptible to the laudatory recognition of his or her work. Praise has no material value yet "how we love it." There is probably nothing that inspires us to better work than commendation of our ability and efforts.

Did you ever see a restaurateur and his chef gleaming at the diners (their patrons) heartily devouring a good meal. The approval of their food gives the restaurateur and the cook more satisfaction than the money they receive for their labors. Eat as though you like the food and your host enjoys the meal better than you possibly could.

Observe your bootblack some morning. Have you noticed how he makes the shine cloth snap and sing? How he rubs and rubs until he can see his own shiny nose mirrored on the toe of your shoe? He isn't working only for that nickel tip. He wants your stamp of approval on his ability as a shiner-of-shoes. Watch his pearly teeth gleam and the whites of his eyes sparkle when you remark "That's some shine!"

Your home town merchants depend for a living upon pleasing you but it is not only because of business reasons that they smile broadly when you tell them about the tasty cakes, the durable shoes, the lovely dress, the excellent suit or whatnot you purchased from them. Try it once and see if they won't try to please you even better with your next purchase. They are not unlike stage folk who can't "do their stuff" without applause. It seems foolish but it is extremely human.

But while you are passing around your praises and encomiums, don't overlook those at home. It will help the children to do better work in school and to be more obedient at home, it will make the housework less a drudgery for the women folks and a little praise now and then makes the serious business of making a comfortable living for the wife and children a little easier and more pleasurable for the man of the house.

CAUTION

A Boston journal, stirred by the first intimation of weakness in the back of winter, but refusing to be swayed into any rash prophecies in the matter of spring, indicates a conservative advance notice to the new season bearing the following cautious caption: "The Spirit of Spring; subject to correction from the weather bureau."

Spring in Bristol and vicinity being hardly less capricious, may we not revamp an old song and address it to the vernal newcomer in this guise? "It is not raining rain to men, it's raining daffodils (not responsible for non-deliveries of daffodils growing out of strikes, windstorms or cloudbursts.) In every dimpled drop I see wild flowers on the hills (watch your hat, overcoat and wildflowers; we are not responsible for their loss.)"

"It is not raining rain to me, but field of clover bloom (seeds are carefully selected and handled, but seller makes no guarantee as to resultant crops.) Where any buccaneering bee can find a bed and room (to insure rooms during bees' convention patrons are urged to wire hotel immediately for reservations.)"

Sometimes a floating indebtedness gets heavy enough to sink.

Those who Really Love Their Children Will "Get" This—

"I bought a Ford," says a man who previously owned a more expensive car. "I have a young son and daughter. By the time they are 17, I will have saved enough, driving my Ford, to put both children through college."

[This same man adds, "I can sympathize with the man who expects to get a great 'kick' out of driving a more expensive car—but I doubt that he gets what he expects."]

SYNOPSIS

"I wish to God you had known I loved you, John!" she said. "I wish to God I had had the courage to tell you so—instead of sitting there, like a tongue-tied little fool, waiting for you to tell me that you were too proud and too decent even to think it was possible for you to tell me."

He laughed, bitterly. "How could I think you'd be willing to wait?" he said. "—Oh, I ought to have spoken! I've been punished for keeping quiet!"

"We both have, John," she said, her voice low. "I've tried to be a good wife to Phil Herdian. I've never loved him—for a long time I haven't even been able to respect him."

"What are we going to do?" he said.

"Nothing," she answered, quietly. "You know that, John. You know it as well as I do. There is nothing for us to do. We are the sort of people, you and I, who put ourselves above duty and honor. There is nothing for me to do except to go on, as I have been doing. I am Phil Herdian's wife, and so I shall remain."

He nodded. "You are right," he said. "There is nothing for us to do." He raised his head, proudly, then, and looked at her. "But—I'm glad I know, at last!" he said. "I'm glad you have told me, Viola. Somehow—it makes it easier to go on."

"This—this is the end," she said.

"Yes," she said. "I'm glad you know, too. I wanted you to know. I shall always love you, John—and I shall never see you again, except by chance."

"Never?" he said, startled. "But—yes, you're right. It's better so. Better for both of us."

"I knew you would see it as I do," she said, gently.

"I think we agree about most things," he said. "That—Isn't that one of the reasons we love one another, John?"

He said nothing, and she began to gather her things, making ready to go.

"I wanted you to know," she said. "I wanted you to know that, in my heart, I am with you, and against these men you are fighting. Against Phil, too. He is weak—he is not vicious, like Jordan and some of the rest. But he has let himself be used—he has been on to all that is best in himself. He has good instincts, John—that is the worst of it. He knows what is right, and, in his heart, he wants to do it."

"I think that is quite true," said John. "Even the other day it was only Jordan's influence that drew him back."

"Yes. So—remember that my heart is with you, John. But—I shall be loyal to my husband. When he is in trouble my place is at his side. Whatever he asks me to do to help him, I shall do."

"I wouldn't want you to say anything else," said John. "It wouldn't be like you to adopt any other attitude, Viola."

She stood up, and held out her hand.

"Good bye, John," she said.

"Good bye,—my dear," he said.

He stared at her as he took her hand.

"Good bye," he said.

"This—this is the end," she said.

"No—don't come with me. Good bye."

CHAPTER XIII

The crisis was approaching. Judge Gordon and the rest of the great array of high priced lawyers retained to defend Henry Jordan, the master mind of finance who stood behind the wreckage and looted N. Y. and C. V. R. R., Phil Herdian, titular president of that collapsing property, and the rest of the indicted men, had come to the end of their power to delay the trial. Almost the last move Gordon made was to secure a change of venue—to procure an order from the court that the trial should take place in another county than Ventnor.

"Appreciating to the full, as I do," he told the newspapers still friendly to Jordan, "the added expense and trouble to which this move puts the county, I still feel forced, in justice to my clients, to make it. Here in Ventnor passions run high. My clients are blamed, unjustly, to be sure, for the deaths of loved and respected citizens in a wreck they deplored as deeply as any other good citizens must."

"What chance is there that here, at the very scene of this tragedy, they can secure a fair and impartial trial? How is it possible to find here twelve men for the jury unaffected by the public feeling? No. It is in exercise of my duty to see to it that those who have entrusted their fortunes, their very liberties, to me and to such skill as I possess, that I must ask the court, in its wisdom, to remove the actual trial to a place where the issues can be determined simply and solely on the basis of the evidence—of the facts that counsel on both sides may bring out."

John Ballard, annoyed and irked, still kept his temper.

"The matter is one for the learned Court to decide," he said to a reporter for the one newspaper openly friendly to him—the Sun. "I have enough confidence in the fairness and honesty of Ventnor to be sure that these men could have a fair trial here. But, on the other hand, I have no reason to fear the result, to matter where the trial is held. The case is so complete, the evidence presented will be so damning, that nothing can alter the outcome. They may hold the trial in Thibault, if they please—the jury's verdict will be the same!"

But he wasn't, privately, quite so sure as he wanted people to think he was. He knew perfectly well, of course, what Judge Gordon had almost instinctively seen—that the more sensational and obvious portion of his case was the weakest one. John Ballard was an excellent lawyer, as well as a good prosecutor—the two are not always combined in the same man. And he knew the difficulty there would be in securing a conviction on the charge of manslaughter.

Indeed, unless something unexpected occurred, he hardly hoped for that. What he was sure of, so far as it is possible to be sure of anything, was that, with public opinion behind him, he could convict on the minor charge of fraud—a conviction that ought to carry with it a prison sentence of two or three years for Jordan and Herdian—the other defendants, he thought, would probably get off, and he didn't particularly mind that. They had, after all, only obeyed orders; their choice had been the difficult alternative of doing as Jordan told them or resigning their jobs. John was an essentially just man, and he was able to allow for temptation as a factor in determining the degree of moral, as opposed to legal, guilt.

Always, too, he was worried by the little haunting fear lest the other side manage to make something of that sorry, forgotten business in Honest Pete O'Brien's.

Slowly, but surely, the day set for the beginning of the trial drew near. It had been transferred to the seat of a county up the state—Plainsville, a small city. Here, as the day approached, everything was transformed. There was only one hotel in town, and Jordan had practically bought it. In it he and his lawyers and the other defendants made their headquarters.

A leading citizen put his house at John's disposal, and in it he and his assistants made their home. There were a thousand things to be done. Prospective witnesses had to be examined; the lines of examination and cross examination had to be worked out; down to the last detail, preparations had to be made to counter every move of the defense that could be anticipated. John was as busy, in the last days before the trial, as a general whose army is preparing to launch an attack upon which the issue of a whole campaign rests.

While Jordan stayed in Plainsville Phil Herdian spent much of his time in Ventnor, carrying on the actual business of the railway that could not be too often or too long deferred. He spent his nights in Plainsville, however, riding back and forth the distance of seventy-five or eighty miles between the two cities in a car every day. (To be continued)

CAR + RENT = A HOME

Being a Story of What Might Have Been

John Jones was an ordinary good citizen. He had a happy home (rented at so much per month), a good wife and two healthy, bustling youngsters.

Each month John paid the landlord $30.00, a moderate rental, and the Jones family was happy.

Came a time when John felt for the polished patter of the automobile salesman, $200.00 down and $10.00 a month he paid for his new "Four in Line" sedan.

For two years the Jones family enjoyed their new plaything. Then the Browns and the Grays flashed by in their "latest motor masterpieces" and the Joneses longed for more "pith," more speed, more cylinders, and four-wheel brakes. Getting a new car was the answer.

But—this time Jones happened to meet up with a real estate salesman. He talked—Jones listened—learned much and received a hard jolt. Translated into dollars and cents here was the jolt: His car, complete—plus freight, insurance and "extras," had cost him exactly $805.27. In the two years of steady running it had travelled over 7,000 miles at an average cost of five cents per mile—total $350.00.

In those same two years $1,200.00 had been spent for rent. Thus his expenditures for car and rent over the two year period amounted to $2,555.27. Allowing $300.00 for the present market value of the car meant a net expenditure of $2,255.27—with nothing to show.

An average home would cost approximately $6,000.00. That same amount of money put into a home would have meant a clear title in seven years—and then no further payments for rent.

The Jones family have returned to the shoe leather route for transportation and are paying on a home. Their former "surplus" happiness now becomes genuine joy. The new car will come later.

Arrest Brothers For Stealing Chickens

stealing chickens for some time.

It is charged that Henry Tscheschleg, the oldest of the brothers, sold the stolen chickens on his huckster route. He was arrested yesterday while calling on his customers. Walter was arrested at the Clay Hill school, William was arrested near Easton and Gaterna was brought in from a farm where he worked.

Investigators say that Mrs. Tscheschleg told Sabatina Wolford, of Tintum township, that her stepsons stole the chickens in the vicinity of their home recently.

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

THE MERCHANTS HERE—

Are known to all of us and if purchases made here are not satisfactory they can readily be exchanged and the MERCHANTS WILL MAKE IT RIGHT.

A CIVIC DUTY—

It is a civic duty owed to the community to buy in our home town. Local merchants support Bristol and its activities and in turn they deserve to be supported.

VARIETY OF STOCKS—

Often times it is the complaint of the shopper who goes out of town to buy that local stores do not carry the assortment or the grade of stock which is desirable. Any wide-awake merchant will stock his shelves with that class of merchandise that is demanded. That is only good business.

PRICES ARE LOWER—

This is another excuse which is often given by those who go out of Bristol to shop. It is reasonable to suppose that merchants here are not making any larger profits than those engaged in business in the cities. Overhead expenses in Bristol are sure to be lower than those in the high rent districts of the large cities.
